“Why is there power in grieving together?” - Grieving Transcript Recording by Valarie Kaur, 2021

When people who have no obvious reason to love each other come together to grieve, they give birth to new relationships, even revolutions. This is why I call grieving together an act of revolutionary love. The ability to be brave with our grief, our own and another’s—that will determine whether we can transition America and the world, whether we can reckon with the past enough to start healing it together and to start to reorder the world as we know it so that those atrocities don't repeat again and again and again.
